White paper on epilepsy out

A white paper on the rights of employees with epilepsy in the workplace and employers' obligations to them is released by the non-profit organisation Enlighten – Action for Epilepsy. It is the first such report in Hong Kong, where more than 650,000 people suffer from epilepsy. The paper addresses the concerns of white-collar professionals who fear a seizure in the workplace might lead to discrimination, the loss of their job or social exclusion. It was created as part of the HOPE campaign – funded by Operation Santa Claus – aimed at identifying epileptic-friendly organisations.
